the future for any attempts which may take place against the life of the Emperor' The sitting of Tuesday the 12th was excedingly violent, a deputy of the right asked for liberty; another deputy of the right Mr. Taillefer delivered a singular speech in which he commenced by saying that the mode of Universal Suffrage in vigour was defective, and would bring on a conflict between the executive and representative powers; in this case a coup d'Etat would be fatal. In the contrary case it fails as Charles X, and we fall into a revolution. This is the degree of irritation into which the discussion has arrived at its commencement. But I have said enough on French politics and altho' in truth the only interesting part of my letter I feel bound to speak on the European situation generally. To judge from appearances the question, o the Duchies is less manacing now than 10 days ago, in this sense, that the effusion of blood has been avowed up to the present time, and then there is a division in the ranks of the Federal powers. The one party wish to respect the Convention of London of 1852 and the other party wish to sustain at all hazard the pretensions of the Duke of Anjustembourg and separate the Duchies from the Danisl crown. Prussin and Austria wish, it appears, to maintain the Convention of London. I say it appears, because nothing positive is known as to the intentions of the two powers. It is true that at the time I am writing, notes have been addressed to Berlin and Vienna, to know whether in the case of the German Diet pronouncing itself for the separation of the Duchies-Prussia and Austria would réfuse to obey andthus break the Federal compact-As you see Mr. Editor, there is in this question of the
